

Plant Fact Sheet

Euphorbia amygdaloides var. robbiae

Robb's Wood Spurge

Description: Evergreen spreading perennial. Size: 15" tall x 24" wide. Rosettes of dark green glossy leathery leaves. Yellow green (chartreuse) flowers, late winter to spring, lasting for months.

Landscape Value: Year-round interest; deer-resistant; tolerates varying light conditions; spreads to cover large areas quickly and provides greater interest through the year than more common evergreen groundcovers; combines well with Cimifuga, Fern, Hosta, Ligularia.

Culture: Sun or shade (light dappled shade is best). Moist, humus-rich soil. Cut flowering stems down to ground when flowers fade (summer) to encourage basal growth. Divide in spring. Protect skin from milky sap when pruning. NOTE: can be invasive - use where wide area of groundcover is desired.
